

CICR

Opinion note : the ICRC as seen through the pages of the Review, 1869-1913 : personal observations / David P. Forsythe

Document type:	Article
Title:	Opinion note : the ICRC as seen through the pages of the Review, 1869-1913 : personal observations
Author zone:	David P. Forsythe
Host item entries:	International review of the Red Cross,
Languages:	English
Abstract:	The early years of the Review, then called the Bulletin International des Sociétés de la Croix-Rouge, provide numerous insights into the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), which edited the journal. Since the ICRC was very small in those days and without support staff, one learns a great deal, especially about Gustave Moynier, who led the organization and carried out most of the editing duties at the Bulletin. The reader can trace the role of religious and other motivations, attitudes toward colonialism, the evolving nature of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and the ICRC's place therein, and complex relations with States. This early era, as richly recorded in the journal, stimulates a number of questions about further research into ICRC and Red Cross history.
Authors:	Forsythe, David P.
Keyword in English:	ICRC INTERNATIONAL REVIEW MOYNIER GUSTAVE RED CROSS MOVEMENT
Keyword in French:	CICR REVUE INTERNATIONALE MOYNIER GUSTAVE MOUVEMENT DE LA CROIX-ROUGE
Go to:	International review of the Red Cross / ICRC International review of the Red Cross [Vol. 100, no. 907/908/909 (150 years of humanitarian reflection), 2018] / ICRC